Subject: TPP QRISK2 error

Dear LMCs

I have spoken today with Dr. Arvind Madan from NHSE, who is concerned that about half of practices affected by this issue have not accessed the lists NHSE has provided them of their affected patients.

I would agree with him that practices should be aware of who these patients are and that it would be difficult to defend a practice that had not done so.

He proposes to send those practices who have not accessed this information a reminder, and also encourage them to fill in a workload survey which will be used in negotiations with TPP to try to secure recompense for the work involved.

I have given GPC's support for this action, and would be grateful if you could encourage your practices to access these lists. Once the information is obtained, it is up to GPs to prioritise this work in accordance with their other clinical duties.
